An “academic year” (AY) shall commence on the first day and terminate on the last day of an entire academic year, as determined by the institution of higher learning, and to include summer sessions (i.e. generally this covers fall, spring and summer). Some schools start in the summer, check with your school’s Administration Office to determine what your school regulations are.

Note: It is the student’s responsibility to verify with each school what fees are waived—tuition and fees for summer sessions, online and continuing education classes abroad are typically not waived. Also, even when a waiver is granted, many schools do not waive summer sessions. Students taking classes during the summer may have to pay all tuition and fees if the college does not waive the summer session.
